Seasons

Now that Labor Day Holiday is upon us, we are moving inevitably to the seasonal celebrations that make life meaningful. According to the liturgical calendar, we are celebrating Ordinary Time which is defined as the period between the end of Easter Season and the beginning of Advent. This Sunday marks the 23rd Sunday, reminding us that there we are twelve weekends away from celebrating Thanksgiving and the first Sunday of Advent. During these months, summer turns to fall, we prepare for winter, and no matter what the weather may bring due to climate change, we continue to plan celebrations that correspond to our beliefs.

Catholics often use the word liturgy, but it remains unfamiliar to many. By literal definition, liturgy means the work of the people. When we assemble for Sunday Mass, we offer thanks and praise to God along with all the work we pursue from one week to the next. One may ask further, how does the work of the people relate to the sacraments and our communal prayer? (Continued on page 5...)

Estaciones

Ahora que se acerca el Día del Trabajo, nos movemos inevitablemente hacia las celebraciones de temporada que hacen que la vida tenga sentido. Según el calendario litúrgico, estamos celebrando el Tiempo Ordinario, que se define como el período comprendido entre el final del Tiempo Pascual y el comienzo del Adviento. Este domingo marca el vigésimo tercer domingo, recordándonos que nos quedan doce fines de semana para celebrar el Día de Acción de Gracias y el primer domingo de Adviento. Durante estos meses, el verano da paso al otoño, nos preparamos para el invierno, y sin importar lo que traiga el clima debido al cambio climático, continuamos planeando celebraciones que correspondan a nuestras creencias.

Los católicos a menudo usan la palabra liturgia, pero sigue siendo desconocida para muchos. Por definición literal, liturgia significa el trabajo del pueblo. Cuando nos reunimos para la misa dominical, damos gracias y alabamos a Dios junto con todo el trabajo que realizamos de una semana a la siguiente. Uno puede preguntarse además, ¿cómo se relaciona el trabajo de la gente con los sacramentos y nuestra oración comunitaria? (Continúa en la página 5...)

Our celebration of sacraments makes Jesus Christ visible in a ritual way by making us aware of what has real value in our lives. Sunday Mass is an expression of thanksgiving that calls us to attribute to God all that we do and are so we may offer all that we have and are to God. The following story may help to illustrate this more clearly.

A friend was preparing for the sacrament of matrimony. I assisted them with the preparation and was pleased to witness their marriage. He was beginning his career as a police officer and was often dismayed by what he experienced in his work. One day, while discussing the vagaries of life, he asked, "Is all this worth it?" I took this question to mean, does life have any real value? I responded, "Yes, to love and to be loved makes life worthwhile, and faith is the gift that allows us to believe that love gives life meaning." While this response didn't detail a step by step understanding how one might find life's meaning and purpose, it provided the first step in understand how any of us can develop a life-long understanding of what is meaningful to us in the present moment.

Having work, making good friends, staying close to family members, learning to accept even those that don't love us, all of these and more make for the good life. Having the chance to work with others for a common good is far more valuable than having riches, fame, or power. Belonging to the body of Christ, keeps us together that we may celebrate the work of the people and find our true worth.

Nuestra celebración de los sacramentos hace visible a Jesucristo de manera ritual al hacernos conscientes de lo que tiene un valor real en nuestras vidas. La Misa dominical es una expresión de acción de gracias que nos llama a atribuir a Dios todo lo que hacemos y somos para que podamos ofrecer todo lo que tenemos y somos a Dios. La siguiente historia puede ayudar a ilustrar esto más claramente.

Un amigo se estaba preparando para el sacramento del matrimonio. Los ayudé con la preparación y tuve el placer de presenciar su matrimonio. Estaba comenzando su carrera como oficial de policía y, a menudo, estaba consternado por lo que experimentaba en su trabajo. Un día, mientras discutía los desafíos de la vida, preguntó: "¿Vale la pena todo esto?" Tomé esta pregunta en el sentido de, ¿tiene la vida algún valor real? Respondí: "Sí, amar y ser amado hace que la vida valga la pena, y la fe es el don que nos permite creer que el amor da sentido a la vida". Aunque esta respuesta no detalló una comprensión paso a paso de cómo uno podría encontrar el significado y el propósito de la vida, brindó el primer paso para comprender cómo cualquiera de nosotros puede desarrollar una comprensión de por vida de lo que es significativo para nosotros en el momento presente.

Tener trabajo, hacer buenos amigos, permanecer cerca de los miembros de la familia, aprender a aceptar incluso a aquellos que no nos aman, todo esto y más contribuye a una buena vida. Tener la oportunidad de trabajar con otros por un bien común es mucho más valioso que tener riquezas, fama o poder. Pertenecer al cuerpo de Cristo, nos mantiene unidos para que podamos celebrar el trabajo del pueblo y encontrar nuestro verdadero valor.
