The Widow's Mite
By Fr. Jon Pedigo

The story of "The Widow's Mite" (Mk 12:41-44) is one of the most endearing in the gospels. A poor widow offered a handful of coins to the Temple treasury. Though her contribution was small compared to others, it was all she had. This story highlights that philanthropy is a central tenet of Judaism. Jewish people, both in ancient times and today, are called to give 10% (a tithe) of their wealth to the poor. This act of giving is called "tzedakah" (from a root word meaning "righteousness," "justice," or "fairness"). By giving, the giver acknowledges that all people, especially those without land, business, family, or money, are integral members of the community. All Jews, including those considered "poor," are encouraged to participate in tzedakah. Let's take a moment to unpack this ancient practice, revisit the parable, and consider what it suggests for our own charitable practices today.

Tzedakah should not be understood merely as charity. At its core, this practice embodies an act of solidarity—a connection between giver and receiver. (Continued on page 4...)

La ofrenda de la viuda
por el padre Jon Pedigo

La historia de la "ofrenda de la viuda" (Mc 12,41-44) es una de las más entrañables de los evangelios. Una viuda pobre ofreció un puñado de monedas al tesoro del Templo. Aunque su contribución era pequeña en comparación con la de otros, era todo lo que tenía. Esta historia pone de relieve que la filantropía es un principio central del judaísmo. Los judíos, tanto en la antigüedad como en la actualidad, están llamados a dar el 10% (un diezmo) de su riqueza a los pobres. Este acto de dar se llama "tzedaká" (de una palabra raíz que significa "rectitud", "justicia" o "equidad"). Al dar, el donante reconoce que todas las personas, especialmente aquellas que no tienen tierra, negocio, familia o dinero, son miembros integrales de la comunidad. Se anima a todos los judíos, incluidos los considerados "pobres", a participar en la tzedaká. Tomemos un momento para analizar esta antigua práctica, revisar la parábola y considerar lo que sugiere para nuestras propias prácticas caritativas actuales.

La tzedaká no debe entenderse simplemente como caridad. En esencia, esta práctica encarna un acto de solidaridad, una conexión entre el que da y el que recibe. (Continúa en la página 4...)

Even the widow, despite her own poverty, was not exempt from giving. Her act demonstrated her awareness of others' needs, showing that some were in even greater need than herself. Tzedakah is not intended to inspire pity for "those" people; it creates a fabric of mutual responsibility and recognition—inviting us to truly see one another and, ideally, to connect. In Mark's gospel, we see how people had become disconnected, especially between the powerful in Jerusalem and the disenfranchised poor in Galilee and society's margins. Social disconnection in the Roman Empire was reinforced by a rigid social hierarchy, where the poor were physically and socially relegated to society's edges—hence the term "marginalized." This separation rendered the poor largely invisible to the broader population. Although wealthy citizens contributed to the Temple treasury to support individuals like the widow, she herself remained unnoticed by those making substantial offerings. Her social invisibility underscored the issue that Jesus and his disciples saw so clearly.

Society begins to break down when we lack relational connections with our neighbors. Without a real, heart-felt connection, we do not know each other's stories. When our perspectives are shaped not by the shared experiences of our neighbors but by biases and stereotypes, we separate ourselves further: "They" live over there, and "we" live over here. There may be connection, but not relationship—and no solidarity. When we marginalize people, what remains are those who think and look just like us. We may even go to extremes to maintain this separation, sometimes using violence to reinforce social divisions.

As disciples, are we not called to break down the barriers that separate us? Are we not asked to dismantle the socio-economic constructs that keep us apart? Doesn't the gospel urge us to see one another as individuals, each with stories of struggle and dreams, rather than reducing each other to stereotypes? And when we give, shouldn't our generosity help build a community grounded in the understanding that we are fundamentally connected? If we truly believe in our shared humanity, what can we, as a Church, do to transform a society divided by race, religion, language, and economic status into a movement of acceptance and transformation?

(Continuación de la pagina 1)

Incluso la viuda, a pesar de su propia pobreza, no estaba exenta de dar. Su acto demostró que era consciente de las necesidades de los demás, mostrando que algunos estaban en una situación aún más difícil que la de ella. La tzedaká no tiene como objetivo inspirar compasión por "esas" personas; crea un tejido de responsabilidad y reconocimiento mutuos, invitándonos a vernos verdaderamente unos a otros e, idealmente, a conectarnos. En el evangelio de Marcos, vemos cómo las personas se habían desconectado, especialmente entre los poderosos en Jerusalén y los pobres marginados en Galilea y los márgenes de la sociedad. La desconexión social en el Imperio Romano se vio reforzada por una jerarquía social rígida, donde los pobres eran relegados física y socialmente a los márgenes de la sociedad, de ahí el término "marginados". Esta separación hizo que los pobres fueran en gran medida invisibles para la población en general. Aunque los ciudadanos ricos contribuían al tesoro del Templo para ayudar a personas como la viuda, ella misma pasaba desapercibida para quienes hacían ofrendas sustanciales. Su invisibilidad social subrayó el problema que Jesús y sus discípulos vieron tan claramente.

La sociedad comienza a desintegrarse cuando carecemos de conexiones relacionales con nuestros vecinos. Sin una conexión real y sincera, no conocemos las historias de los demás. Cuando nuestras perspectivas no están moldeadas por las experiencias compartidas de nuestros vecinos sino por prejuicios y estereotipos, nos separamos aún más: "Ellos" viven allá y "nosotros" vivimos acá. Puede haber conexión, pero no relación, ni solidaridad. Cuando marginamos a las personas, lo que queda son aquellos que piensan y se parecen a nosotros. Incluso podemos llegar a los extremos para mantener esta separación, a veces usando la violencia para reforzar las divisiones sociales.

Como discípulos, ¿no estamos llamados a derribar las barreras que nos separan? ¿No se nos pide que desmantelamos los constructos socioeconómicos que nos mantienen separados? ¿No nos insta el Evangelio a vernos unos a otros como individuos, cada uno con historias de lucha y sueños, en lugar de reducirnos unos a otros a estereotipos? Y cuando damos, ¿no debería nuestra generosidad ayudar a construir una comunidad basada en la comprensión? Si realmente creemos en nuestra humanidad compartida, ¿qué podemos hacer, como Iglesia, para transformar una sociedad dividida por la raza, la religión, el idioma y el estatus económico en un movimiento de aceptación y transformación?

Silent Retreat for Men & Women
Advent December 13-15, 2024

Learn to Pray
With Mary, the Mother of Carmel

Father
Thomas Reeves,
O.C.D.

"But Mary kept all these things, pondering them in her heart"
(Luke 2:19)

Since ancient times, Carmelites have looked to Our Lady as their mother and perfect model of prayer who helps and teaches her children to pray as she did. What better way to prepare to celebrate the Birth of Jesus Christ than by spending these days of Advent with His Blessed Mother? Mary is the one who lived that first Advent waiting in joyful hope for the coming of her Savior Jesus Christ. This retreat will take place in an atmosphere of silence to allow everyone the freedom to have a personal heart to heart dialogue with the Lord and experience His Love anew.

A chance to come away and rest with engaging talks, mass, adoration, prayer, silence and fellowship.
